

Heavy turn-out for community project

The people of Indian Head responded in droves Wednesday afternoon to a two-hour, outdoor community weiner roast.

Numbers estimated to be approximately 350 enjoyed hot dogs, coffee and drinks on the lawn next door to the Credit Union. Law enforcement officers, members of the Indian Head R.C.M.P. detachment, and local post office employees worked and supervised the project.

Marg Ollett, post mistress at Indian Head, reported that the project netted close to $500.00.

Constable Serge Lalonde noted that 300 T-shirts had also been sold, all part of the community's contribution to the 1995 Torch Run.

A third prominent worker, Jim Landry, who works at the Correction Centre in Regina, was helping sell Torch Run apparel and souvenirs. He was one of the original organizers of the local connection to the prestigious run where funds derived are directed to Special Olympics.
