

1. Will you commit to changing the deadly and unacceptable health conditions faced by individuals with intellectual disabilities?

-Yes. Will need to communicate directly with the representatives for people with intellectual disabilities, so that we can identify and target the most urgent issues.

2. Will you engage individuals with intellectual disabilities and their supporters during the policy-making process on all issues that impact their health and wellbeing?

-Yes. It is important to include and consult members of any community when constructing policies that address their needs and concerns.

3. When in government, will you commit to ensuring the Ministry of Health prioritizes improving health outcomes and quality of life for people with intellectual disabilities?

-Yes. We certainly can not force the Ministry of Health to prioritize the needs of an individual group over others, but we will make sure the issues of people with intellectual disabilities are brought to the forefront of their attention.

4. Will you commit to creating a governmental task force to improve the health of people with intellectual disabilities?

-No. With the ongoing Covid crisis, we will unlikely have the budget or necessary supplementary resources to create such a specific task force at the present time.

5. Will you commit to supporting sufficient funding and resources to ensure people with intellectual disabilities will no longer face inequality in health and in life?

-Yes. Many advocacy groups currently lack funding so it is impossible to say if the funding provided will be adequate to cover all the resources necessary for every group, but we will aim to disperse the funding in an equitable manner.
